HE LIVED AMONG THE CANNIBALS

Returning Missionary Told Last Night of Nine Years Experience in Africa.

ONE CONVERT IN THREE YEARS

Was the Record Dr. Royal Dye Made on His Advent in the Uncivilized, Dark Regions.

No more interesting story has been told in Rush county in months than that told last night at the Little Flat-rock Christian church, by Dr. Royal J. Dye of his nine years experience among the cannibal people of dark Africa. Three years of preaching and work without a convert did not discourage this courageous and God fearing missionary and when at the expiration of three and a half years, he was given the joy of baptizing one convert out of that heathen nation, he thought his time was well spent.

The story of his trip to Bologne, Africa, over perilous and almost unknown waterways and through forests and mountainous country with cannibals in every direction, was one that excited the sympathies of the vast audience for the fearless bearer of the tidings of christianity to a new country.

Dr. Dye traveled over two hundred miles of railroad in the depth of Africa that it is said cost a human life for every tie laid. The fare over this road was $100 and the trip took four days.

When they are once led to understand the Christian religion and the story of Jesus Christ, they are all glad to accept it and as they are converted they become missionaries carrying the story to the wild cannibal tribes farther into the forest. Many times these volunteer native missionaries are tortured, scourged and subjected to all kinds of indignities by the chiefs and other officials of these wild tribes who do not want to lose their power over their people by allowing them to hear of the new teachings.

These natives, once they become converted, are ready and anxious to make any and every sacrifice for the cause and endure the worst hardships. With not nearly enough workers in this field and an insufficient amount of funds to support those who are in the field, the work is spreading in this heathen country and whole tribes of cannibals are becoming civilized and peaceful through the influence of these Christian workers.

Dr. Dye says one of the greatest difficulties they had was in finding words in the native language to express what they wanted to say. Although the native languages are full of beautiful and poetic phrases, which express even more in instances than our own complicated languages, they have no letters or hieroglyphics to designate what any word or phrase stood for or to perpetrate their language.

The collection of curios exhibited by the returned missionary were very interesting and attracted the attention of everyone. Dr. Dye explained the use and construction of all these curious objects, many of which showed considerable native skill, especially the implements of warfare, as the cannibals live almost entirely on the spoils of war, both in the way of prisoners and property.

ROBBERS WERE NOT VERY SUCCESSFUL

Entered the Home of Mrs. Powell in North Main Street and Stole
Pound of Butter.

FRIGHTENED BY NEIGHBORS

Mrs. Powell, mother of Homer Powell, was frightened last night about 9 o'clock by robbers in the back part of her home in Main street. She immediately telephoned for her son, Homer Powell, and also for Marshal Price, who were soon upon the scene. In the mean time the neighbors had been aroused and had frightened the burglars away.

Investigation later showed that the robbers had cut the wire on the back door screen and had reached through and unhooked the screen. The door was open and the entrance into the house was easily made.

A pound of butter was the only thing which was found missing. Marshal Price returned later in the evening and could discover no traces of the thief.

TO HEAR DIVORCE CASE.

New Castle Courier: The jury reported for duty in the Circuit court today but was dismissed, the case on the docket having been compromised. It will not report for duty again until next Tuesday, when Judge Sparks will be here to hear the evidence in the Walker divorce suit, a change of venue having been taken from Judge Jackson.

CHEAPER TO MARRY.

A Richmond man has just been sued by an admiring young lady for $50,000 for breach of promise. At this distance it looks like it would have been cheaper to marry the girl, notwithstanding the fact that eggs are thirty-five cents a dozen and other table necessities proportionately high.

AGED FATHER OF TWO INVENTORS

Bishop Milton Wright, Father of Airship Inventors to Visit Rush
County Relatives.

WRITES OF ACHIEVEMENTS

Is a Brother of the Late Rev. Harvey
Wright of Center Township.

Bishop Milton Wright, father of Wilbur and Orville Wright, the inventors of the most successful air ship the world has ever seen, will soon be in Rushville and Rush county to visit relatives here. He has visited here on numerous occasions and is a brother of the late Rev. Harvey Wright who died at his home in Center township about two years ago, where for over fifty years he officiated as a Baptist minister. His son, Thomas Wright now resides at the old home place in Center township and it is there that the father of the now famous inventors will visit. The two boys have not been in Rush county for a number of years but they will likely come within the next year as they keep up a correspondence with their cousin, Mrs. Cora Wright Dillon of North Main street, this city.

Bishop Milton Wright is one of the foremost prelates in the United Brethren church. He is proud of his boys and lends them every encouragement in furthering their inventions.

Concerning the home and early life of the Wrights at Millville, Henry county Milton Wright, their father and an old pioneer of Henry county writes in part as follows: "It was at this nice little home, two and a half miles northeast of Millville, that Wilbur Wright was born, April 16, 1867. As the family removed to Hartsville in September, 1868, this son's life in his natal home was brief. Early incidents relating to him, though interesting to the family, are not important to justify publication.

Wilbur was a child of good size strength and activity, and walked when about eight months old. At fifteen months, when turned into a room, he seemed to see all the mischief available in it at a glance, and always found the greatest first. Perhaps there is now nothing very remarkable in the size or shape of his head, but then it was so high that a hat becoming him was hard to find. Up to his nineteenth year he was distinguished for health, strength and activity. He excelled in skating, making and flying kites, and in gymnastics exercises on a turning pole. He did not attend school till he was about eight years old, and had already been taught by his father to read. But from the first, he had facility in learning, and close application, and as these in later years did not forsake him, he excelled as a student. He pursued more than a full course in high school, and closed at Dayton, Ohio, but could not graduate there because of his years in the high school course had been pursued elsewhere—Richmond, Indiana. His parents thought of sending him to Yale College, but in playing a game on skates, at the Soldiers' Home, the bat of a young man flew out of his hand and struck Wilbur, and some two or three weeks later, palpitation of the heart developed, and for years he was unable to pursue a student's life though his much reading and study in that time nearly equaled the advantages of a classical education. His mother be a de- miner, rather than a sufferer, invalid, he devoted himself to taking all care off her, and watching and serving her with a faithfulness and tenderness that can not but shed happiness on him in life, and comfort him in his last moments. Such devotion of a son has been rarely equaled. And the mother and son were fully able to appreciate each other. Her life was probably lengthened, at least two years, by his skill and assiduity. He all these years used his spare time to read and study, and his knowledge of ancient and modern history, of current events and literature, of ethics and science, was only limited by the capacity of his mind and his extraordinary memory. He became a clear writer, and a clear writer, and a ready extemporare, almost wholly without practice in the latter.

His brother Orville Wright was born in Dayton, Ohio, August 19, 1871, and never lived nearer to his brother's native home than Richmond. Orville was the fifth son and sixth child (as Wilbur was the third) a pair of twins that died young intervening. His education beginning at Cedar Rapids, Iowa, when his father was bishop of West Mississippi District, was pursued, in 1881-1884, in Richmond, Indiana, and was closed in Dayton, Ohio, where he pursued three years in the high school, and then at about seventeen years of age ran into job printing and publishing a little advertising paper, in which Wilbur joined him some years later. He began typesetting earlier on a small scale in a kitchen, with a very small outfit and worked on till, untaught, he became a rapid and correct compositor, an accurate proof-reader and a fine printer. He always worked for himself, and in his earlier printing, his presses were invented and made by Wilbur who was a natural workman in wood, iron or any other material; but those presses were mostly made of wood, and were a curiosity to many who came to examine them. Orville in later years fully equaled his brother in invention, and in workmanship. In childhood, Orville planned a turning lathe with a grindstone for a main wheel and Wilbur constructed it. Wilbur was the most fruitful in inventions, but Orville had as many valuable ones as his brother.

When about seven years old, living in Cedar Rapids, Orville got up an army of boys—fifteen or twenty—and was chosen general. His enthusiasm always made him a leader among boys, and happily his leadership was never toward vice. He loved to tell his mother of his army and its progress; and as he did so placing his hands on the seat of a chair, he would punctuate his narrative by his heels flying into the air. It is a wonder that overenthusiastic political speakers have never learned that method of emphasis and punctuation; for it is the natural language of exhilaration. At the Cedar Rapids schools, Orville was generally selected as one of the readers when visitors came in. On one occasion he was called out to read. Unlike his brother, whom fright could not rattle, his timidity got the better of him, and he held his book wrong side up, but he read from memory with triumphant success. He was also called out at that early age to show the pupils proficiency in music. There were three in the trio of these singers. As Orville said, he was chosen for his good voice, another for the volume of sound, and the third 'to keep it going.' But there are too many incidents of school days to trifle with our readers.

"I might add that the brothers' father, brothers and sisters have never opposed them in their inventions and navigations, but have encouraged them, and taken a lively interest in their progress and success. Their father was an eye witness of their first long flights (21 and 24 miles) in 1905."

CLOSED THE SCHOOLS.

The Morristown Sun says: Trustee Sleeth has closed the schools at Gwynneville until after Thanksgiving because of diphtheria, seven pupils having been sent home on Monday with sore throats.

DID YOU GO SOMEPLACE?

If You Didn't It Was Your Own Fault.

If you couldn't find some place to go last night you should have taken a car out of town, the traction station being convenient. The skating rink had its opening; the 99 cent store had an opening with flowers and music; the Red Men had a big time in three different halls, giving a reception to the newly elected Great Junior Sagamore, O. C. Norris and then there were the Grand and Vaudet with two excellent bills.

NOT TO BE RIVALED BY THE EPICUREAN

Was the Banquet Served by the Ladies of the Pocahontas at Red Men Reception.

IN HONOR OF O. C. NORRIS

A banquet was given in the K. of P. building last night by the Red Men in honor of one of their members, O. C. Norris, who was recently elected Great Junior Sagamore.

A turkey supper was served by the ladies of the Pocahontas, which far outvalued any spread ever offered by the most tasty epicurean in days gone by.

Plates were laid for three hundred guests. Many toasts were responded to by members of the visiting tribes and Lieutenant-Governor Frank J. Hall and O. C. Norris made brief speeches which were very fitting for the occasion.

The following councils attended: Connersville, Arlington, Milroy, Fayetteville, Mays, Falmouth, and Andersonville.

A number of notable personages were present among whom were: C. A. Robinson of Greenfield, Great Chief of State; George R. Kismet of Terre Haute, Great Sachem; Chas. M. Stoute of Middletown, Great Senior Sagamore; Otto Wolf of Indianapolis, Great Chief of Records, and Frank G. Castor of Indianapolis, Great Keeper of Wampam.

NO THANKSGIVING RAILROAD RATES

Local Agents Have Received no
Orders as to Special Prices
This Year.

WILL REDUCE USUAL TRAFFIC

It begins to appear that there will be nothing doing in the way of Thanksgiving rates on the local railroads. So far no advertisements have appeared announcing reductions in tickets for the Thanksgiving travelers, and inquiry at the local ticket offices brought out the information that the agents here have received no information on the subject. Usually at this time of the year the bulletin boards at the railroad stations are crowded with posters announcing special rates for Thanksgiving day.

JOURNALISTIC ENTERPRISE.

Journalistic enterprise is something always to be commended, but those newspapers that have been printing pictures of Mrs. Lydia Pinkham and trying to palm them off as Tsz Hsi An, late dowager empress of China, are carrying the joke a little too far.

MISSION WORK HIGHLY PRAISED

Girl's Industrial School Established in Memory of Child of Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Betker.

GIRLS GET WHAT THEY MAKE

Mrs. Betker and Mrs. Stewart, the Principle Instructors, Have Four Regular Assistants.

The Indianapolis News pays a high tribute to several Rushville ladies, who have organized the Girl's Industrial School, in the following article: Few citizens here realize the great amount of good that is being accomplished in the Girl's Industrial School, which opened its second year's work the first of this month. The school was established by Mrs. T. W. Betker and Mrs. A. L. Stewart, of Rushville, as a memorial to Mrs. Betker's only child, Lillian, who died a few years ago.

The school is located at the Mission church, headquarters of the local Salvation Army corps. Girls up to the age of fifteen are admitted. These come from the families of the poor. Sometimes parents have objected, saying that their children are needed at home, but such was exceptional cases. The girls in the school show their great appreciation of the kindness and attention shown them by taking an unusual interest in the instructions given. They are taught plain and fancy sewing, including the use of nine different stitches, how to make and mend their own clothes and to darn.

The girls are at no expense, all necessary supplies, needles, thread, thimbles and material for making and mending their clothes being furnished free. Every garment made is given to the girl that makes it.

Cleanliness, good manners and morals are also taught, and the school is a veritable hive of industry during its sessions, which are held on Saturday of each week. The enrollment last year reached seventy pupils and the attendance this year promises to be much larger. The results obtained have far exceeded the expectations of those in charge. The high degree of efficiency and skill attained by many of the girls is a surprise to themselves as well as to the parents and instructors. No effort is spared in making the instructions thorough and complete.

Mrs. Betker and Mrs. Stewart have not asked for aid in meeting the expenses incurred. The donations, which have been liberal, have come unsolicited, and have been ample for all needs. The two principal instructors have four regular assistants—Mrs. R. C. Hargrove, Mrs. Owen Kincaid, Mrs. J. T. Arbuckle and Mrs. H. E. Barrett, all of this city.

LOVERS OF CIVIL WAR DAYS ARE MARRIED.

The marriage in Greenfield of John H. Scott, of Carthage, and Mrs. Emma Munden, of Greenfield, is connected with a romance. The bride groom is seventy-nine years old and the bride seventy-two. Over a half century ago they were sweethearts. The civil war came and Mr. Scott enlisted and served until he was severely wounded. Circumstances kept the young people apart, and the young woman became the wife of Isiah Munden. After Mr. Munden's death the old love affair was revived and the wedding was the result.

The Many Sided Kaiser

Eccentricities and Indiscretions of Emperor William of Germany, Who Has Been Charged by the Reichstag With Talking Too Much

By JAMES A. EDGERTON.

GERMANY is in trouble, and it is all because the kaiser talks too much. Members of the reichstag have taken it upon themselves to criticize this imperial garrulity in the most public and unprecedented manner. One speaker went so far as to assert that if any one less than the ruler had been guilty of such an indiscretion as the London Telegraph interview he would have been arrested and tried for treason. Another wanted some assurance that there would be no more breaks in future. While the reichstag refused to adopt any official resolutions on the subject, members of all parties plainly showed their disgust with the latest turn of the emperor's universal activity and received Chancellor von Bulow's explanation of the affair in the cold silence of disapproval. Meantime, while the empire was seething, the kaiser was himself hunting foxes—er was it stags? Anyway, he was hunting. The kaiser is the most famous royal huntsman in Europe. It is estimated that he has shot no less than 50,000 pieces of game in his life, which is going some for one as irrepressible as William II.

When it is considered that at the same time he has been doing all this slaughtering of dumb creatures he has knowing about anything whatsoever is not only leze majesty, but borders closely on treason.

Indiscreet Interview.

The London Telegraph interview, over which the recent turmoil has broken out, was written by a retired diplomat and represented a talk he had had with the kaiser. The object of the talk was to reassure England of William's friendship. The features of it most criticized are that it was an unwarranted interference of the emperor in politics without consulting his government, that it stated a majority of the German people are hostile to Great Britain, that it gave the purpose of Germany's increase of her navy as intended to participate in the Pacific situation, thus offending Japan, and that in it the emperor had told Queen Victoria how to whip the Boers. The interview contained other indiscretions, but these are more than enough to set the world's diplomats and the German reichstag by the ears, all of which they very promptly did. Then it developed that these are not the only interviews given out by William. One appeared in the Century Magazine and was suppressed only after many copies of the edition had gone out. This interview is said to be even more sensational than that in

"It hurts me worse than it does you."

"Perhaps so," replied the sobbing lad, "but not in the same place."

The third indiscretion occurred when Prince William was made colonel of a regiment. One of his first acts was to try to regulate the uniforms of his soldiers. They thereupon complained to Emperor William I. Calling in his young grandson, the aged kaiser reproved him for interfering with the uniforms of his soldiers.

"Am I colonel of this regiment?" said the prince.

"Certainly."

"Then your majesty must permit me to look after my command without interference of any sort; otherwise I throw up my commission."

Another indiscretion occurred after William became emperor. One day he entered the schoolroom at Potsdam and began to scold his children till both they and the governess were in tears. "I will be obeyed! I am master!" he was saying. Just then the empress happened in and settled the matter by saying that he was master in his kingdom, but she was mistress here.

At a later time he designed some dresses for the empress, but was nonplused when she asked how she was to get into them. He had failed to provide a way.

No Vassalage For Them.

One of his greatest bulls, however, was in seeking to be made emperor in fact over all the German states. At present the princes of these states in a way are independent, at least in name. In pursuance of his plan for increase of power William called all these princes before him. He made a speech, and as they seemed to fall in with his suggestions he waxed bolder in outlining his desires. In an unguarded moment, however, he made the break of referring to them as "vassals." Instantly one of them replied: "No, sire, not your vassals—your allies, if you like."

On another occasion he wrote in the "Golden Book" of the city of Munich this inscription: "There is no law other than the royal will." Below it the Prince Regent Luitpold, not much of a friend of the kaiser, wrote this: "The supreme law is the interest of the state."

A further indiscretion was committed by the kaiser in attempting to interfere in the succession in Bavaria. A judicial court was finally compelled to decide the case adversely to his man. He has also interfered in partisan politics on several occasions, a thing no hereditary ruler is supposed to do, and thus gained the ill will of several groups, notably the Poles and the Socialists.

Some of his military maneuvers have been secretly laughed at by old officers of the army, one of them having been characterized by General Stulpnagel as "a species of military tomfoolery."

All the world is familiar with the way the emperor has interfered in matters of music and the drama and has tried to write poetry and to paint. Among his international breaks prior to the present one was that in which he wrote to Lord Tweedmouth concerning the British navy, raising a storm throughout Great Britain, and that in which he suggested that the American ambassador to Berlin should be a millionaire.

Clamor Against Personal Government

Considering all these unfortunate occurrences and many others not here catalogued, the storm that has broken about the kaiser's head because of his latest indiscretion need not occasion surprise. What the end may be no one can tell. There is already a loud clamor throughout the German empire that personal government shall cease. It is somewhat surprising that the German nation, which is in advance of the world in most lines of thought—in art, music, science, philosophy and even certain phases of politics—should be behind the leading countries in this important respect. No other great nation except Russia tolerates personal government. Intelligent Germans keenly feel this fact and have long clamored for a ministry responsible to parliament rather than to the whim of the sovereign. The present crisis may bring this sentiment to a head and force the settlement of the question in accordance with the popular demand. As recently pointed out by a celebrated German statesman, no change in the constitution or the law is necessary to establish the dominance of parliament. It can be done, as it was in England, by refusing to vote revenues. This power, which is lodged with the people's representatives, is sufficient to bring any king in Christendom to his knees. The German parliament is rapidly getting into a temper where it may use this ancient weapon.

There is another side to the character of William, however, which is much more pleasing. In his recent speech in explanation of the emperor's ill starred interview Chancellor von Bulow said the kaiser is an idealist, and the truth of this is borne out by William's utterances and his acts. For one thing, he is sincerely desirous of the world's peace. This has been proved over and over again. He is ambitious for his country, but in a commercial way.

In measuring the German emperor one other fact must ever be borne in mind. Whatever may be his eccentricities, he still remains, as he has been for many years, the overshadowing royal figure in Europe. No other king measures with him in energy, in intellect or in mastery of affairs. He ruins as he hunts. Spectacular he may be, yet he manages to bag his share of the game. He may have his royal finger in all pies, but the world is at least conscious of his presence through every day of his reign.

Fires Are Raging.

Carmi, Ill., Nov. 21.—Forest fires have been raging in southern Illinois for the past thirty-six hours and the damage has been quite serious. Thousands of acres of valuable timber land have been burned and farmers for miles around have been fighting the fire for the past twenty-four hours. Dense clouds of smoke hover over hundreds of towns and cities in southern Indiana and southern Illinois due to the forest fires.

Italians of the poorer class generally enjoy good health. This is partly attributed to the fact that the working classes of Italy eat less meat than those of other European nations.

EMPEROR WILLIAM—THE WAR LORD ON HORSEBACK.

also acted as arbiter of art, poetry, the drama, religion, besides running an empire and making suggestions to practically all the other rulers on earth, the pervasive and ubiquitous nature of his activities can be somewhat realized. Yet even this statement gives but a faint notion of the multifarious manner in which he gets his finger into all the pies that are baked on this small earth. He writes poems and dramas, composes operas, takes part in theological discussions, looks after the commercial expansion of his empire, attends to the duties of his various ministers until they are little more than clerks, drills his armies, runs yachts, looks after the navy, lives in forty-nine different residences, suggests his wife's dresses, handles the domestic life of his sons, makes of his court the most gorgeous and spectacular in Europe, goes over the heads of his cabinet and handles foreign affairs for himself, claims to have suggested the plan by which Lord Roberts finally whipped the Boers, travels extensively and makes speeches in other countries, writes letters to cabinet members in foreign countries and gives interviews to foreign publications and generally looks after all affairs, public and private, domestic and foreign, artistic and industrial, ecclesiastical and political, even to mixing in party politics, until he has been accused of trying to usurp the functions of Providence and of being the general regulator of all things, human and divine. Nor is this the worst charge against him. In the recent reichstag debate it was suggested that he not only talked too much, but did not know what he was talking about; that the experts of the different fields he invaded laughed at him in their sleeves. This is the most unkindest cut of all, according to the double superlative of Shakespeare—or was it Bacon? And if there were any more superlatives they should be added also. To accuse the emperor of not the London paper, and as some of the magazines containing it are in the hands of correspondents and diplomats the thing is liable to bob up at any time. It is now stated that a third indiscretion has come to light in the form of a letter written by the kaiser to Queen Wilhelmina of Holland during the Russo-Japanese war in which rather ominous threats were made if Holland did not fortify her ports against England. How many more of these imperial letters and interviews will bob up in the various chancelleries and newspaper offices of the world is the thing that is now interesting Germany.

It must be said on William's behalf that he talks rather freely to newspaper men and others, but on the pledge of secrecy. The president of the United States, to whom the German emperor has been likened, does the same thing. If anybody dares to quote Mr. Roosevelt after having been told not to do so, he is promptly called a shorter and uglier name. William might do the same but for the fact that both he and his ministers approved the London Telegraph interview before it went out. Under the circumstances he can hardly get out by enlarging the Ananias club.

A New York newspaper years ago printed a list of the kaiser's indiscretions, and they occupied nearly an entire page. Now they are occupying the whole of Europe. There is nothing that will grow like the indiscretion habit if assiduously cultivated.

Pulled Bismarck's Mustache.

The first of William's breaks occurred when he was five years old. It was then he grabbed Bismarck's mustache and held on till his grandfather had to pry him loose. His second blunder is now a chestnut. It occurred but a little after the Bismarck episode. A governess one day had to punish William severely and after it was all over said tearfully:

Saturday November 21, 1908.

Scientists say that power may be generated from mud. If political mud has the same power producing qualities what a quantity of power could be generated in every political campaign.

Very much may be said in commendation of the school gardens that have been established in some places and which seem to be growing in popularity. They have an economic value that will show itself in the after life of children, and they also develop a love of refinement and of the beautiful that is sure to exert a potent influence in making the home brighter and more attractive.

Thanksgiving Day, as an institution, is not observed in every State of the union, but the spirit which prompted its birth and which it was designed to promote prevades the whole nation. And there is every reason why it should. There is not one of us but has good cause to be thankful for the blessings bestowed upon us. To be sure there are dark days—days of sorrow, trial and bereavement. But take life as a whole, year in and year out, and it will be seen that the sunny days are far more numerous than the dark, and that the joys of life far outnumber its sorrows. Of course this is true only of the life that is spent wisely, using to best advantage the faculties with which God endowed it and recognizing in Him the Giver of all good.

The final report of the Department of Agriculture estimates the corn crop for 1908 at 2,642,687,000 bushels. This figure has been exceeded only three times—in 1899, when it was 2,666,440,000 bushels; in 1905, when it was 2,707,993,000, and in 1906, when it was 2,927,416,000. The crop of 1907 was 2,592,320,000 bushels. Thus it will be seen that this year's crop is above the average of recent years. As prices are higher than they were when those larger crops were harvested, the income of the corn raiser this year will probably be greater than it was in any previous season.

Corn is the country's imperial crop. It brings to the producer more than does any other farm product. For about half a dozen years its farm value has been over $1,000,000,000 annually. For 1907, it was $1,337,000,000. It will go beyond $1,400,000,000 for 1908. There is a close race between hay and cotton for the second place among the crops in aggregate value, with hay often ahead. In 1907 the figures stood at $675,000,000 for cotton and cotton seed, and $660,000,000 for hay. Wheat brought $500,000,000 to the farmers for 1907, oats $360,000,000, potatoes $190,000,000, barley $115,000,000, tobacco $67,000,000 and other products brought in smaller amounts.

As the farming element is still the largest ingredient of the population, and as everybody consumes farm products, large crops have a vital interest for the country. The aggregate of the cereal crops for 1908 will be almost up to the highest figures of the past. The higher prices will bring a bigger income to the farmers than in any previous year. Secretary Wilson a few weeks ago estimated that the value of the farm products of 1908 would be above the $8,000,000,000 mark, which is a higher figure than they ever touched in the past. The favorable crops will be a large element in the country's prosperity. From the beginning of the year the country has been saying that two things would be needed for the restoration of prosperity—good crops and a Republican victory for president and Congress. The country has gained both of them, the latter in particularly large measure. And the evidences of the approaching prosperity are so numerous that everybody sees them.

INDIANA POLITICS

Robert G. Tucker.

Indianapolis, Nov. 21.—The list of entries for the speakership was increased today when Representative John H. Faulkner, of Michigan City announced that he will be a candidate. Mr. Faulkner is the Tenth district representative of the Democrats as far as the house is concerned. He publishes one of the leading Democratic newspapers in northern Indiana and is a business man of wide experience. His friends feel that he is well qualified for the speakership. He proposes to make an aggressive fight. Mr. Faulkner came here to investigate the election laws governing the naturalization of foreigners. He says that several thousand foreigners were voted illegally by the Republicans in Lake, Laporte and St. Joseph counties. He proposes to put a stop to the practice of naturalizing foreigners who are not entitled to their papers by introducing a registration law. He would provide for two registration days, one ninety days before the election and the other forty-five. This would give both parties ample opportunity to investigate the standing of the voters. Two years ago a similar bill was defeated. Inasmuch as the Democrats have charged for several years that they were defeated because the Republicans corrupted the elections, Mr. Faulkner may have a chance to get his bill through. The candidates for the speakership besides Faulkner are Representatives Strickland, Honan, Garrard and Behmer.

Albert Lieber, president of the Indianapolis Brewing company, and Crawford Fairbanks, president of the Terre Haute Brewing company, who returned last night from a brewers' meeting in Chicago, declared today that it is the intention of the brewers to keep hands off in the race for the United States senatorship. Neither will they take a hand in the fight for the speakership of the house of representatives, according to Mr. Lieber. Considerable interest has been manifested in the Chicago meeting. Both Fairbanks and Lieber denied that the Chicago meeting will have any bearing on the senatorial situation. Besides Lieber, Fairbanks and Bell, Maurice Donnelly of the Terre Haute Brewing company and State Senator Stephen B. Fleming of Ft. Wayne, who holds large brewery interests, were present at the Chicago meeting.

None of the candidates for the speakership or the senate have been able to get much of a line on what the Democratic members propose to do. Only a few members have been here since the election and none of the candidates for the senate have opened headquarters.

John W. Kern, senatorial candidate, has been out of the running for three days because of a severe attack of acute indigestion which has confined him to his bed.

Talk About Sleeping

Women are like men when it comes to sleeping. Plenty of restful sleep makes a man strong and vigorous, and it makes a woman happy and beautiful. But both women and men can procure restful sleep by using Sexine Pills. It is well known that nervousness and overwork prevent sleep. It is equally well known that Sexine Pills produce that delightful relaxation that folds one's tired limbs in nature's arms while the unconscious body draws new life and vigor. Sexine Pills are the perfect tonic. They are guaranteed for all forms of weakness. They cost $1 a box; six boxes for $5, with full guarantee inclosed. Address or call Hargrove & Mullin, Rushville. This is the store that sells the principal remedies and does not substitute.

Hundreds of people who suffer from backache, rheumatism, lame back, lumbago and similar symptoms of kidney trouble. Pineules for the Kidneys, act directly on the kidneys, bringing quick relief to backache and other symptoms of kidney and bladder derangements. 30 days' trial $1 and guaranteed, or money back. Sold by Lytle's drug store.

THE BATTLE.

THERE was no bugle to call to the charge.
No banner to wave in air.
But a still, brave warrior who fought his fight
With the militant hosts of care.
There was no trumpet to sound the song
Of triumph at the end,
But the silent battle went on and on
In the face of foe and of friend.

There was no guerdon of glory before him,
There was no sword or shield;
He led no ranks in the gay phalanx
On green or golden field.
But he fought a battle, a brave, bright battle,
And smiled through the humble strife,
One of the thousands, the terrible thousands,
Who fight in the battle of life.

His strong right arm with strength to labor,
His heart with the will to sing,
Were the dauntless weapons he took to the battle.

And he fought the fight of a king,
For he fought full hearted, with love for a guerdon.

And down in the lists of day
He rode in the battle to bear from its rattle
The rose of devotion away.

—Folger McKinsey.

What Our Neighbors Are Talking About

THE STINGY THINGS.

(Shelbyville News.)

A farmer and his wife visited a local restaurant a few days ago. The wife ordered a meal and the husband a stew. Mrs. Farmer was ill and unable to eat all her food and Mr. Farmer was so filled with his own order he could not down it. But, argued Mrs. Farmer, the food has been paid for and is ours. Five minutes later she returned from a neighboring store with a plate on which she placed the remaining food and left with all concealed in a sack she got from the proprietor.

A traveling man at a local store a few days ago placed five nickles in a cigar machine and drew five cigars. Without the chance he could, for twenty-five cents, secure six cigars. He demanded the other cigar and threatened to prosecute the merchant for gambling.

DOG FIGHT VS. PRAYERS.

(Shelbyville News.)

A dog fight was the cynosure of interest near Harrison and Broadway Thursday evening and many men, with good intentions, but unstable resolve, missed church to witness the contest. For twenty minutes the canines, without pedigree of fame but sufficient grit, "chawed" each others neck and, in dog language, gave plain expression of opinions of one another.

A more determined fight, outside of bull dogdom, has not been witnessed for some time. Both curs, one yellow and the other a cross between a poodle and an English setter, were antagonists worthy of their sires.

SHOT STRUCK HIM IN THE EYE BALL

Russell Casady May Lose the Sight of an Eye—Was Purely Accidental.

WAS HUNTING WITH A PARTY

While hunting on the old Readle farm, west of this city yesterday, Russell Casady, of the shoe firm of Casady & Cox, was unfortunate in being struck in the left eye by a stray shot. One of the party, fully one hundred yards away, fired a shot gun and it is thought one of the shot struck a fence and bounded off, striking Casady in the eye. The shot is still in the eye ball and it is thought he may lose the sight in that eye.

Samp Casady, a brother of Russell Casady, lost the sight of one of his eyes several years ago, a piece of wire striking him on the eye ball.

Let Children Be Children.

By Professor MICHAEL VINCENT O'SHEA of Wisconsin University.

OVERESTIMATION IS THE BIGGEST PROBLEM THAT CONFRONTS US IN THE EDUCATION AND BRINGING UP OF OUR CITY CHILDREN. DEGENERACY AND MENTAL DEFICIENCY IN A FEW GENERATIONS WILL BE THE RESULT OF THE PRESENT SYSTEM OF LIFE IF WE DO NOT CALL A HALT TO THE NERVOUS STRAIN AND UNHEALTHY AMUSEMENTS THAT WE NOW SUBSTITUTE FOR CHILD PLAY.

We have the example of the old world to warn us against our present course of OVERSTIMULATING OUR GROWING CHILDREN. There are more mentally deficient and degenerate persons in Italy than in any other country, and that is because the YOUNG LEAD AN ADULT LIFE AND ARE EARLY FORCED INTO MATURITY by the life lived in the noise and publicity of the streets.

GERMANY HAS FORGED AHEAD AS A NATION BECAUSE IT HAS SOLVED THE EDUCATIONAL PROBLEMS BY KEEPING ITS CHILD LIFE SIMPLE, BY CULTIVATING NATURAL AND INDUSTRIAL TENDENCIES AND BY SAFEGUARDING HEALTH.

What we need in America is to DRAW OUR CHILDREN AWAY FROM THE NERVE DESTROYING AMUSEMENTS, PROVIDE THEM WITH AMPLE PLAY FACILITIES remote from the confusion of the streets, and in school emphasize the industrial, manual and artistic rather than the MERELY TECHNICAL.

AMUSEMENTS

Manager Grand M. Carr has succeeded in securing for one night only, Tuesday night, that famous play that has set all America and Europe crazy, "The Devil." Never in the world's theatrical history has there been shown such interest as in the production of Franz Molnar's continental success, "The Devil" (Der Teufel). This without any doubt will be the dramatic sensation of the entire season, and will be presented here by an entire New York cast of players, using the same excellent version of the play as now being produced at the Garden Theater, New York City. Dorothy Dix, the famous dramatic critic of the New York Evening Journal says: "The Devil" is a lesson to women. 'The Devil' teaches such a moral lesson as we all need in these days of mighty temptations, and its lessons are for each and every one of us. Men should see it, because it teaches how the evil thought that we daily with, may become a demon that possesses us, and drives us into a wrong that we really abhor."

Large and appreciative audiences were in attendance at the Vaudet last night and enjoyed another fine program. The talking pictures now being presented is one of the best ever offered in this city and proved a strong hit last night. Tonight there will be a new reel of pictures, with the same talking pictures and song.

The opening of the Kramer Rink last night attracted an unusually large crowd. The rink will be open again this evening. Beginning next Wednesday there will be skating every evening the rest of the week and skating in the afternoons beginning Thursday. The floor is in excellent condition this year and was thoroughly enjoyed by those skating last night.

CARTHAGE GOES AFTER TRACTION

Citizens Will Hold a Mass Meeting Monday Night in the Town Hall.

SHOW A PROGRESSIVE SPIRIT

Enterprising Denizens There Set a Good Example for Others to Emulate.

The people of Carthage are going after an interurban line in true earnest and the enthusiasm they display is worthy of emulation on the part of many sleepy county seats. The Carthage Citizen has the following call for a meeting to be held Monday night.

"Remember the interurban meeting at the town hall Monday evening Nov. 23, at eight o'clock. Everybody—men and women are requested to be present and help boost this projected road. Come out, be ready to help discuss this greatly needed and much desired enterprise. Enthusiastic and determined co-operation will accomplish wonders. There are two or three tentative routes and plans, anyone of which might be feasible. This is a matter in which every one should manifest real interest. The value of an interurban line connecting Carthage with the outside world can at this time scarcely be appreciated. Property would embrace in value, business would receive a new impetus, and the great convenience arising from hourly passenger and frequent mail and freight service would be most gratifying. Contrary to prophecy the small towns touched by interurbans have grown and prospered. Let us keep pace with the times, make our town easy of ingress and egress, and contribute all we can to it's commercial life."

COULD NOT FIND THE MISSING WORDS

No One Submitted the Correct Guess for the Thursday Evening Issue.

PRIZE IS NOW INCREASED

There were many guesses submitted this morning for the missing words in Thursday evening's issue, and for the first time no correct answers were received. The missing words were "old" in Reed & Son's ad. and "now" in Wolf's ad.

Quite a number guessed one of the words, but none guessed both. According to the rules governing the contest, two dollars will now go to the one getting in the first correct answer for Friday evening's missing words.

It will be well to bear in mind the system governing the receiving and filing of answers before they are opened. All the letters received by mail and all received in person at this office are filed in the order in which they come. Then the two piles are stacked, first one from one pile and one from another. On alternating mornings the first letters opened is selected from the mail pile and from the personally presented letters. This has proven a most equitable and fair plan.

As the Friday evening prize is now two dollars a large number of replies are expected Monday morning.

STRUCK ON THE FACE.

ADVANTAGE OF THE NEW LAMP OVER OLD

The Tungsten Much More Economical Than the Old Carbons Which Are Commonly Used.

HANDLED BY SUPERINTENDENT

Superintendent A. T. Mahin of the city water and light plant has prepared a table showing the advantages of the Tungsten lamp over the carbon lamps which is now commonly used.

The Tungsten lamp is a much more expensive lamp at first cost, but soon becomes cheaper and in time will save money. A 32 candle power Tungsten will consume 40 watts, while a common carbon lamp is consuming 100 watts, and in the same proportion, the larger the candle power of the lamp.

This makes a gain of 60 watts on a 32 candle power globe, which will soon offset the extra price of a Tungsten lamp. And the attraction comes in the amount of light thrown out. The Tungsten gives about three times as much. It has been proven that these new lamps are much more economical than the old carbons and they are now being handled by the superintendent for the trade.

WASHBURN-CROSBY'S

GOLD MEDAL FLOUR

But the Grocer has more — Thank Goodness.

Lady Betty Across the Water.

By C. N. & A. M. WILLIAMSON.

Copyright, 1906, by McClure, Phillips & Co.

My first impression of the Emporium was a huge, rambling wooden building rather like a vast barn with a dozen smaller barns tacked on to it and windows let in. It is painted pea green and has a rough veranda running partly around it—a high veranda with no steps, or, if any, at such long intervals that you must search for them. But as there's no pavement we just scrambled out of the buggy and cart on to the veranda, and there we were landed among the most extraordinary collection of things I ever dreamed of. The stock in the Emporium having overflowed from the inside on to the veranda, we stumbled about among boxes of eggs, sewing machines, crates of dishes, garden tools, brooms, rocking chairs, perambulators, boots, "canned" fruit, children's toys, luggage, green vegetables, ice cream freezers, bales of calico, men's suits, piled up books, clotheslines and a thousand other "goods."

Just as we threaded our way through the groups of young men, who looked at us a good deal, people were lighting the gas in the Emporium. It was incandescent and blazed up suddenly with a fierce light as if it were a volcano having an eruption. All the women inside (there was quite a crowd of them, bareheaded or in perfectly fascinating frilled sunbonnets) shrieked and then giggled. A man who was surrounded by girls said something we couldn't hear which made everybody laugh, and Mr. Trowbridge exclaimed: "That's Whit, sure, holding court. Couldn't be anybody else."

"And I guess that's the honorable," said the voice we had heard—such a nice voice: it was enough to make you laugh with pleasure just to hear it—and the head we could see towering over the sunbonnets began to move toward us. The girls edged away good naturedly, and there was a man almost as fine looking as Mr. Brett smiling at us and holding out his big hand.

Everything was big about him—his voice, his brown throat, his shoulders and his good white smile, shining with kindness and two rows of perfect teeth; his nature, too, as you could see by his beaming, humorous gray eyes and the generous dimple in his square chin.

"Whit, this is the little English ladyship I've told you about who's staying over at our house," said Mr. Trowbridge. So we were introduced, and the great Whit shook my hand with a vigorous magnetism which made me feel I would like to clap and give him three cheers.

He is the sort of man I should try to make president of the United States if I were an American, and I'm sure he would get lots of votes from his part of the country if he were nominated.

"I'm real pleased to meet you," said he, "and I'm honored to have you visit my store. Say, I guess some of our American leading ladies will have to get a hustle on if they want to save themselves now you're over here. I didn't know they made 'em like that on your side. I tell you what it is, honorable, I won't have much use for some of our fellows if they let her go back, eh? Now, ma'am, you just tell me what handle I'm to put to your name, but I think I'll call you princess."

"Then I'll call you prince." Accompanied by Mr. Walker and Patty, whom he chose as the companion of our explorations, we went upstairs and downstairs and left no corner of the Emporium unvisited.

"Aren't you afraid to leave so many things outside on the veranda?" I asked. "Suppose they should be stolen?" The great man only laughed, but a lanky customer who overheard drawled out:

CORRECTION: Gold Medal Flour is cheapest—it's best, too—more loaves to the sack—UPPERMIA.

"What, steal from Whit Walker of Hermann's Corners! Waal, I guess the skunk mean enough to do that would get himself lynched by every decent chap in this darned county."

"I've got one friend, you see, princess," chuckled my king of the Emporium.

"You've got two," said I.

"Well, now, that's mighty pretty of you. Say, do you mean it, honor bright?"

"Honof bright," I repeated.

"Then I wonder if I might ask a little favor of you?"

"Of course. What is it?"

"I'll tell you before we part. But come on down now, girls. I want you should both choose a present to take home."

By this time the "ice cream festival" was beginning. It was held in a vacant lot behind the Emporium, and a canvas awning had been put up over two or three dozen bare tables on the grass. Several employees of the "store," extra hands perhaps, were kept frantically busy ladling out from huge freezers into earthenware saucers big slabs of frozen custard. All the gallant young beaux of the neighborhood "treated" the girls they wished to favor and spent 10 cents a saucer for the "ice cream," with a big sugared "cookie" thrown in. The great Whit himself invited me to sit down with him. So Mr. Brett, who had been coming up to ask Patty and me both perhaps, whisked Patty away, leaving me to Mr. Walker.

"Now I'll tell you that favor I want," said he. "I hope you won't think I'm presuming too much on a short acquaintance, but it's a mighty important thing for me. It's about that little gal over there."

"Patty?" I asked.

He nodded.

"Nobody else. There ain't anybody else, so far as I'm concerned, meaning no disrespect to you, princess. My old friend the honorable says she just worships you and would lie down and let you walk over her if you wanted."

"I didn't know," I said.

"Well, it's gospel truth, I guess, and I don't blame her. If you—"

"She has been sweet to me," I interrupted.

"It's just like that pretty, quiet little thing," said Mr. Walker. "I wish she'd be that sweet to me. I want her mighty bad to have me, princess, but she's read novels, I guess, and anyhow, she doesn't think I'm romantic enough. I was always kind of afraid there was somebody else. Now, I shouldn't wonder if it ain't that good looking young cousin of the Trowbridges. Couldn't you find out for me, as she thinks such a lot of you? And if she hasn't got her heart too much set on anybody else, could you try to use your influence for me?"

"You can depend on me to do my best," I said. But I didn't feel amused and full of fun any more as I looked over at Patty and Mr. Brett. If she admires him—and how could she help it?—there's no reason why he shouldn't admire her once he comes to think of it. She is pretty and sweet, a perfect little lady and an heiress.

Couldn't you find out for me, as she thinks such a lot of you? And if she hasn't got her heart too much set on anybody else, could you try to use your influence for me?"

"You can depend on me to do my best," I said. But I didn't feel amused and full of fun any more as I looked over at Patty and Mr. Brett. If she admires him—and how could she help it?—there's no reason why he shouldn't admire her once he comes to think of it. She is pretty and sweet, a perfect little lady and an heiress.

"I wish she'd be that sweet to me. I want her mighty bad to have me, princess, but she's read novels, I guess, and anyhow, she doesn't think I'm romantic enough. I was always kind of afraid there was somebody else. Now, I shouldn't wonder if it ain't that good looking young cousin of the Trowbridges. ## DISASTER IN BROOKLYN

Terrific Gas Explosion Opens Up a Street.

BODIES THROWN INTO HOLE

In Some Manner a Spark Was Communicated to a Leaking Gas Main in a Street Excavation and a Disastrous Explosion Occurred—Many Bodies Not Yet Recovered.

New York, Nov. 21.—Twenty-five persons are believed to have lost their lives in an explosion of gas which tore up a great section of Gold street, Brooklyn, yesterday. It is definitely known that fifteen persons were buried under the hundreds of tons of earth and timber that were thrown into the air by the explosion, and ten more persons are reported as missing. The exact number of dead cannot be determined, for those working to recover the entombed bodies must dig through fifty feet of rock and a tangle of pipes and timbers. The explosion occurred in a fifty-foot deep excavation that had been made in Gold street between York and Front streets, where a water main was being laid. The gas main recently sprung a leak and in a manner unknown, a spark came in contact with escaping gas. Immediately there was a terrific explosion that lifted the surface of the street for half a block in both directions and hurled dirt, paving stones and debris into the air. When the smoke and dust cleared away it was seen that the street had been opened from doorstep to doorstep, over an area of nearly a block. The loosened earth and debris had fallen into the excavation, burying the score of laborers who were at work when the accident happened. Great tongues of flames shot out of crevices in the street and beside them geysers of water leaped into the air from a water main that had been shattered. Gold street was crowded with school children when the explosion occurred and that scores of children were not killed or injured is remarkable. A woman and three children were almost opposite the excavation when the earth crumbled under their feet and they were swept down into the hole under tons of wreckage. Two other children were on the opposite side of the street when the sidewalk caved in and they lost their lives. Samuel Trout, foreman of the gang of laborers who were laying the water main, was near the woman and three children, who lost their lives. He rushed forward as he felt the street tremble from the explosion, in an endeavor to save them, but he too, was drawn into the death hole. His body was the first to be recovered. Trout had been roasted to a cinder. Only four of the men working in the excavation escaped, and their escape was remarkable. These men were digging near the opening of a four-foot sewer and the force of the explosion blew them to the entrance of it. Water from the broken main began to pour into the sewer and the four men, in danger of being drowned, started to run toward the river where there was an outlet to the sewer. One of them tells of their experiences as follows:

"Our only chance was in reaching the outlet to the sewer and we ran toward the river. It was all dark and we stumbled and fell over things that had been left behind by workmen. The river was three blocks away. By the time we reached the river the water was up to our waists. We found a bulwark there that had been built to keep the water from coming in while the sewer was being built. We climbed to the top of this and from the top reached the pier. The water had reached our chins before we got out."

The explosion shook houses for blocks around. Thousands of persons were attracted to the scene and the police had difficulty in keeping the people from crowding too close to the smoking pit of wreckage.

TWO STATES QUARANTINED

Believed Cattle Fever Will Be Speedily Stamped Out.

EXPORT SHIPMENTS STOPPED

Apthous Fever Among Cattle Has Been Traced to Its Source and Many Infected Animals Have Been Killed—Shipments From New York and Philadelphia Were Brought to an Abrupt Close.

Danville, Pa., Nov. 21.—A report received at the federal and state headquarters established here by officials investigating the apthous fever among cattle, state that the veterinarians discovered thirty-five well-defined cases of the disease among cattle in Montgomery county in the vicinity of Norristown. The disease was traced to a carload of twenty-two cattle shipped into Montgomery county from Buffalo. Each one of these animals was located and in all it is stated, that thirty-five cases were found and that all of the infected animals will be killed.

Assistant Secretary of Agriculture Schech, said of the state's work that up to the present time more than 1,000 cows have been killed, besides many swine.

The report that five children in this vicinity are victims of the disease is discounted by the statement of Dr. Fox of the state health department, who came here from Harrisburg. He examined the children, who are convalescent, and says that it is doubtful if they ever had the disease. Shipments to foreign ports from New York and Philadelphia were brought to an abrupt close by the cattle quarantine established in New York and in Pennsylvania, on account of the outbreak of the extremely contagious malady called the foot and mouth disease. The quarantine does not affect ports outside of New York and Philadelphia, except as to cattle from the two states affected by the ruling. Western cattle may still be shipped abroad from either Boston or Baltimore. While there is not likely to be any local scarcity of beef or raise in prices as a result of the cattle quarantine, the foreign trade will undoubtedly be seriously hampered for a time. Even Canadian cattle received at these ports in bond, cannot be re-shipped to England and dealers with such consignments on hand will be forced to send them back because the duty on Canadian cattle makes their local use prohibitive. Owing to the prompt and rigid measures taken to stamp out the disease it was thought that the quarantine would not be maintained for a long period.

WISCONSIN AND CHICAGO

Are in Football Field Today for Western Championship.

Madison, Wis., Nov. 21.—The streets of this city are today filled with a riot of yelling students of the male persuasion, laughing co-eds, husky football players and spectacled professors, all talking of nothing but today's gridiron struggle between the University of Wisconsin and her old time rival, the University of Chicago.

From an early hour today the streets and roads leading to Camp Randall have been thronged with pedestrians and vehicles bound for the field where the greatest western football game of the year is to be decided. From all over the western country the alumni of the two institutions have come to lend to their respective teams the encouragement of their presence, their cheers and songs. It looks as though all of Stagg's former Chicago football stars have come to see their successors battle with Barry's men for the supremacy. There is much talk of the former triumphs of the two universities, but it seems to be generally agreed that the outcome of today's contest is involved just now in great uncertainty.

For Eastern Football Title.

New Haven, Nov. 21.—Yale and Harvard meet here today for the football championship of the East. The betting is at even money, both sides being confident of victory. It is the first time in several years that the result of the Yale-Harvard game will decide the championship, and interest in the game is very keen. New Haven is filled with the usual crowd, and seats for the game are commanding a premium. Both Captain Burch of Yale and Burr of Harvard will be in the game. Neither side has been defeated this year. Harvard has played a 6 to 6 tie with Annapolis, and Yale has been tied by brown by the score of 10 to 10.

Protection on Lumber.

Washington, Nov. 21.—"A universal grab game," is the appellation given the tariff by Representative Champ Clark of Missouri yesterday at the hearing before the ways and means committee on the tariff schedule for wood and wood manufactures. The administration's policy for the preservation of the forests figured largely in the argument. Several lumbermen said they wanted a protective tariff on lumber because other articles are protected by the law. This called forth the term of "grab" from Mr. Clark.

THE OTHER SIDE OF IT

Testimony For Defense Now On In Gunness Case.

PROGRESS OF NOTED TRIAL

Excellent Progress Being Made by Attorneys for Ray Lamphere in Introducing Testimony—As Yet No Proposition Advanced by Attorney Worden in His Opening Statement Has Been Followed Up.

Laporte, Ind., Nov. 21.—In the trial of Ray Lamphere, charged with the murder of Mrs. Belle Gunness and her three children, the first witness was called by the defense yesterday. Excellent progress was made in the amount of testimony placed before the jury, but aside from the two witnesses showing that the fire at the Gunness home occurred at 3 o'clock in the morning, no proposition advanced by Attorney Worden in his opening statement was followed up.

Dr. George Wassner, who was called as an expert, was shown the teeth, bridge work, etc., introduced by the state and identified as having come from the mouth of Mrs. Belle Gunness and was asked: "In your opinion was this piece of tooth ever covered by the crown in the other set of teeth?" to which the witness replied: "If it did cover this tooth it was an awful misfit."

Mrs. George Wright, living two miles southeast of the Gunness place, testified that she saw the fire from her house, just as the clock struck three. She could tell that it came up in the center of the brick part.

The trunk mystery was brought into the limelight by the defense when it called State's Attorney Smith to the stand and asked him regarding a trip which he and Roy Marr made to the Warwick place to get Lamphere's trunk after Lamphere's arrest. He told the story and admitted that it was taken to his office, where it was examined.

John Yorkey a hackman, testified that he took Prosecutor Smith and Deputy Marr to the Warwick place and the trunk was brought back to town.

William C. Weir, an undertaker testified to visiting the scene of the fire on the day of the fire and seeing a five-gallon can in the cellar. The can was empty and the solder melted away. The defense then recalled Joseph Maxson, the hired man, who testified that on the evening before the fire he placed the oil can in the hallway at the end of the stairway in the frame part. After the fire it was found in the cellar.

DROPPED A MATCH.

Husband Caused Fire in Wagon, Fatally Burning Wife.

Mt. Vernon, Ind., Nov. 21.—Mrs. Jennie Smith, wife of Marion Smith, a well-known farmer of Center township, was burned to death in a wagon in which she was riding home with her husband.

Mrs. Smith was sitting in the bottom of the wagon bed on a pile of straw. After striking a match to light his pipe, Mr. Smith accidentally dropped the match in the straw. Before Mrs. Smith could get out of the wagon her clothing caught fire and began to burn rapidly. Her husband was unable to extinguish the flames. Mrs. Smith was fatally burned, and after lingering in great agony for a few hours she died. She leaves a husband and several children.

Deputy's Heart Failed Him.

Muncie, Ind., Nov. 21.—Although Deputy Sheriff Thomas Kiger was armed with all the necessary papers for taking into legal custody the two children of Mrs. Minnie Dunkin, who had been declared by the circuit court unfit to rear the children, the officer did not take them. Kiger found the two children, one a mere infant, clinging to their mother's skirts, and the woman hysterical at the thought of losing them. The deputy sheriff tried to reason with the woman, but he did so in a half-hearted way and then left the house with the children still in the woman's possession, while he made a report to Judge Leffler. "You didn't obey the orders of the court?" asked the judge with an attempt at severity. "I can give up my job," said Kiger. "Well, you needn't," said the court. "I'll hear more evidence in this case before I do anything further."

Dry Stream Full of Water.

Columbus, Ind., Nov. 21.—John Scheible, of the Lowell neighborhood, reports that "Possum creek, on his farm, has suddenly become full of water. The creek was as dry as the proverbial bone last week, but now it has plenty of water in it and there has not been a drop of rain. There has also been a six-inch rise in White river within the last few weeks without any rain."

Odd Fellows Elect.

Indianapolis, Nov. 21.—At the closing session of the meeting of the grand lodge, I. O. O. F., in Grand Lodge Hall, J. M. Stipp, of Winamac, was elected grand warden.

POOR PROSPECTS FOR WHEAT CROP

Seeds are Dead in the Ground and Not Much Hope is Entertained For the New Crop.

LONG DROUGHT THE CAUSE

The condition of the new crop of wheat is discouraging in the extreme. Farmers declare it will not yield as much as the seed. Many fields can not make anything at all, for the reason that the planted seed is dead in the ground. There has not been enough rainfall to germinate the seed since planting time, and much of it is lying in the furrows as dry as when it was taken from the granary. Much of the acreage has sprouted and then died for the want of moisture. Still other fields and other portions of fields have grown slightly, but has turned yellow and cannot survive the winter.

The price of wheat at the elevators is a dollar a bushel and a big lot is coming. But grain men and farmers say there can be no doubt about the price going way beyond that before next harvest. Reports received by grain buyers are to the effect that the great drought extends into practically every part of the winter wheat producing section, and that the condition of the crop everywhere is in a very backward state.

THE YOUNGER SET A BIT DIFFERENT

New Serial Story to Start in Daily Republican Next Wednesday Evening.

DEALS WITH A BIG PROBLEM

The next serial story in the Daily Republican promises to be the best we ever published. It is "The Younger Set" from the pen of Robert Chambers, and it will begin next Wednesday evening.

Interwoven with this fine gripping story of a splendid girl and a real Man—one of the most charming love stories of recent years—are the author's views of some of the problems of society. Divorce, gambling, marital unhappiness, are here treated as they enter into the lives of men and women possessed of wealth and social position. If the writer seems harsh in his characterization of the older members of the "smart set," he is tender and hopeful in his views of the incoming generation. In the "younger set," according to him, lies hope of regeneration of the wealthy and fashionable world. As he sees those who sit on the thrones of power, their hands are clean, their hearts are pure, their ideas and aspirations are worthy. When they shall take their mature places in society's ranks, it will acquire a new tone and a better and worthier view of life and its problems and responsibilities than now prevail.

Prices of all living increased; the only exception Mrs. Austins pancake flour. Same old price at all best grocers.

PAINFUL SCALP WOUND INFLICTED

Mrs. Celia Costello Fell Down Stairs at Her Home in West First Street.

9 STITCHES HAD TO BE TAKEN

Mrs. Celia Costello received a very painful but not serious injury at her home in West First street last night. Mrs. Costello was coming down the stairs, when her foot slipped and she fell to the bottom upon the floor. A large scalp wound was inflicted and it was necessary for the attending physician to take nine stitches to sew it up. Mrs. Costello is over 70 years of age and it is nothing less than miraculous that she was not seriously injured.
